What is Stáy?

Stáv is a martial art and philosophical system which uses runes and Norse Mythology in its teaching. Stáv was brought to the public by Ivar Hafskjold and is based on oral tradition preserved in his family for 44 generations. According to Ivar Hafskjold, the term "Stáv" was his family's informal name for their martial and runic practices, and comes from the expression sette stáv (to set staves), which was how the training was described when he grew up.

The name "Stáv" can be considered as a pun or play-on-words, meaning both 'stave' e.g. as in a 'rune-stave', a runic character or rune, and also 'staff' e.g. as a physical weapon employed in the martial art.

In the 1990s, Ivar took on four personal apprentice students; Shaun Brassfield-Thorpe, Kolbjorn Martens, David Watkinson and Graham Butcher. All contemporary Stáv teachers and instructors belong to a teaching lineage directly from either Ivar Hafskjold and/or one of his four personal students, each of whom are recognised by the Stáv International organization as "Stáv Masters".

Ice and Fire USA is under Graham Butcher's lineage, and in fact, most members who attend the martial events are directly instructed by Graham for a portion of their training.

Stáv as a Martial Art

In practice, Stav uses most of the martial components not just as warrior training exercises but also as tools for learning the other aspects of Stáv. In fact, very little of what you learn in the first year is directly applicable in a warrior situation. At least one member of Ice and Fire USA is an avowed pacifist.

Stáv as a way of life

While the martial art applications of Stáv are the most apparent they are not the only ones. Hafskjold Stáv teaches a significant number of non martial practices and principles. Stáv healers abound within Stáv International and each rune is associated with at least one Norse God, at least one animal, tree, herb etc. Stáv also teaches both Seid and Galdre each in both esoteric (open) and exoteric (hidden) frameworks.

What is Ice and Fire USA?

Ice and Fire USA is the USA branch of Ice and Fire Ltd. A British company started by Stáv Master Graham Butcher and dedicated to promoting Stav to the wider public, organizing events and courses and providing a consistent means of communication between all those interested in making Stáv part of their lives.

According to Norse Mythology, before the world of man was created, two primal worlds existed: Nilfheim, land of perpetual ice, and Muspellheim, land of fire. It was in the Gap between these worlds that creation took place and life originated.

Ice and Fire can, therefore, be regarded as the starting point, from which greater things can arise.
